

- Traditional applications have been modeled as monolithic due an easy deployment model
- Several services are combined into one massive single application
- This model leads to a poor use of resources when it comes to scaling out your application
- Greedy components steal resources from others that are colocated with them

